Snowy Surprise: Spring Chill Means One More Chance for RV Ski Trip

In This Issue

Ski Resorts' Spring Specials

Show Details

Spring is usually the time, especially in sunny California, when we start thinking warm thoughts. We pull out the warm-weather camping gear, extract tank tops and shorts from the nether regions of the closet and start stocking up on sunscreen (and maybe a little self-tanner to ward off the fish-belly white afterglow of winter while we're at it).

But this spring is different. March brought record snowfalls, which has many of the state's ski resorts planning on staying open later than usual. Squaw Valley in Lake Tahoe, which usually closes the first weekend in May, will be staying open through Memorial Day. And Mammoth Mountain hasn't even decided on a closing date this year. That means you have another chance to pack up the RV, gather the family and head into the mountains for some exhilarating spring skiing. Check out the links below to find out how much longer your favorite resort will be open.

And after you swing by our 19th Annual Northern California Spring RV Show and Sale, where you can pick up a host of new or used RV accoutrements for your last ski hurrah of the season--or even a whole new rig if the mood strikes you--throw your ski boots and powder pants in the back of the RV and get to it.

I'll definitely see you at the show at the Alameda County Fairgrounds May 13-22, and maybe sluicing down the mountain, too!

Happy RVing!
